RENMIN UNIVERSITY OF CHINA

Introduction to the “Qiushi Scholar” Program at Renmin University of China

The “Qiushi Scholar” Program at Renmin University of China (RUC) is a prestigious short-term visiting program designed for scholars from overseas universities. The term “Qiushi” is derived from RUC’s motto “Seeking Truth from Facts”.

The program aims to attract leading academic scholars and promising young talents with international influence, providing a high-level platform for international exchange and research innovation. It provides overseas scholars with opportunities to deepen their understanding of China, engage in research related to China, and promote exchanges and mutual learning among civilizations.

1. Duration

The program lasts 1 to 3 months, with the exact duration set through consultation with the host department based on the research plan.

2. Categories

- Qiushi Scholars of Excellence: Leading scholars with outstanding academic achievements in their fields of research;
- Qiushi Young Scholars: Promising young academics aged 35 or below, including postdoctoral researchers and graduate students.

3. Supports

- Monthly Stipend: 20,000–40,000 CNY (pre-tax), depending on the category.
- Travel Subsidy: A one-time allowance of 3,000–15,000 CNY, based on regional standards.

- Academic Engagement: Scholars are encouraged to participate in university academic activities, including public lectures, seminars, and academic salons at RUC, and may apply for additional funding for specific activities.
- Language Learning: Scholars may enroll in RUC’s international Chinese language courses free of charge during their stay.

4. Qualification

- Applicants must be foreign scholars, with English or Chinese serving as their working language.
- Applicants should demonstrate excellent academic proficiency in their professional field or exhibit strong academic potential.
- Application materials must clearly specify the expected research outcomes.

5. Application

- Academic departments at RUC may invite collaborating scholars in relevant fields to apply and assist them in completing the university's internal application procedures.
- Outstanding scholars interested in the program may directly contact the International Exchanges and Cooperation Office at RUC via email. The office will match them with a suitable host unit and guide them through the university's internal application procedures.
